the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office of National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the community. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out a vision for the future of older people's services. The strategy is based on the principle of 'active ageing', which is the process of maintaining and enhancing the health, participation and security of older people. The strategy also sets out a number of key objectives, including: to improve the health and well-being of older people; to increase the participation of older people in society; and to ensure that older people are able to live in their own homes and communities for as long as possible.

The strategy also sets out a number of key actions that need to be taken to achieve these objectives. These include: to improve the health and well-being of older people by promoting healthy living and preventing illness; to increase the participation of older people in society by encouraging them to take part in community activities; and to ensure that older people are able to live in their own homes and communities for as long as possible by providing support and services to help them do so.

The strategy also sets out a number of key indicators that will be used to measure progress towards these objectives. These include: the number of older people who are healthy and active; the number of older people who are participating in community activities; and the number of older people who are able to live in their own homes and communities for as long as possible.

The strategy also sets out a number of key challenges that need to be addressed in order to achieve these objectives. These include: the need to improve the health and well-being of older people; the need to increase the participation of older people in society; and the need to ensure that older people are able to live in their own homes and communities for as long as possible.

Take a minute to remember all the good times we have had as students at R.C.H.S. this past year. We enjoyed our experiences in the classroom, at games and dances, in the cafeteria, and in organizations. Many new and different experiences await those who will remain as students of this high school and those who will graduate from it. . .

As the time of graduation nears, many seniors are trying to decide what they want to do with their future. For some of us, college looms ahead. For others the decision is different--a job, the service, or marriage. But whatever the choice, we all hope for the best for ourselves and our classmates.

Getting up at four o'clock in the morning is not much fun. Even so, the debate team did just that before every contest. After a long drive, the day was spent matching wits and verbal talents. Then the debaters anxiously awaited the final results. With the decisive news, the often victorious, sometimes defeated team returned home--reviewing criticism, comparing notes and, in general, striving to improve for the next debate.

1963 Season

John Vollmer

The year is over--the class of 1964 has at last reached graduation. Good times together are ending for the seniors, but the time has come to look to the future rather than the past. There is some sadness--but more happy, eager expectations for what life has to offer. The class of 1964 is ready. Leaving is not sorrow, but anticipation. And so it is with our principal, Mr. Holt. Rensselaer Central High School will seem different next year without Mr. Holt's presence for there will be a new principal and perhaps a few changes. As students of this high school, we express our gratitude and appreciation for the many unselfish services given by this dedicated man, and we wish him the best of luck in his new job.

Special thanks to Mrs. Helen Pennington, advisor, and to Erickson's Studio.
